

IWRC

Education and Resources for Wildlife Conservation Worldwide

Mission

Our editorial mission is to share and further the knowledge of wildlife professionals and those interested in wildlife rehabilitation and conservation through experiences and stories of those working in the animal science field.

Guest Blogging Requirements for the IWRC Blog:

- Well-written and high-quality original article (previously published work may be considered but you must provide us with permission to repost and the contact from the original publishing)
- Short author bio
- Authors are responsible for the accuracy of their work.
- Proper attribution of data, quotations, and other third-party content referenced in the article.
- No length requirements: Posts should be as long as they need to be to be high quality and comprehensive without being verbose.
- Post should be submitted in a Word or Google docs document with any image files (including attribution) attached SEPARATELY. Images should be jpg format.
- Submit all blog entries to director@theiwrc.org

Not-So-Fine Print:

- Submissions must meet the IWRC blogging quality standards in order to get published such as appropriate personal protective equipment (PPE), animal handling, and research methods.
- Please avoid being self-promotional in the body of your article. Save that for your author bio.
- The IWRC reserves the right to edit and adapt your guest blog content as we see fit, and update it in the future for accuracy and comprehensiveness.
- IWRC is not obligated to publish a submitted blog post, regardless of whether we have approached you to consider a submission.
- IWRC will not take any action that directly results in any private entity or person profiting from any contributing writer's work without compensation to the writer.
